INTRODUCTION.

GENTLEMEN OF THE CLASS OF EIGHTY-SEVEN :

It is my pleasant duty to submit to you this first report, as an outline of our college course. The ground covered is the same as is usually covered in the first report ; wherever changes have been made they have been merely in the line of extension. That this report is complete or free from error is, of course, not to be expected. I can only hope that you will treat my omissions and mistakes with the same spirit of courtesy and forbearance that has uniformly met my requests for information, and beg that you will give me an early opportunity to remedy these defects.

It is to be regretted that no more definite information can be given about the temporary members. A number answered promptly and fully the letters sent them, and to those gentlemen I wish to express my sincere thanks on behalf of the class. Many seem to have become absolutely indifferent to their college associates, or, identifying themselves with other classes, fail to conceive of any interest in their welfare on our part.

The list of addresses at the end of the report is as accurate as could be made from the data in my possession. Let me urge upon each one of you the necessity of informing me at once of any change of address that the value of this important part of the reports may not be impaired.

We shall entertain the class of '88 at Commencement next year in some room in the college yard, to be announced later. Notices will be published in the Boston Herald, Post, and Advertiser, and the more important in the New York Times.

The next report, to be issued in 1890, will be a record of your personal careers after graduation. Let me ask each and all of you to contribute to its completeness by writing to me any news of any '87 men you may have.

I will gladly answer, to the best of my ability, any requests for information about '87 men.

Your classmate,

GEORGE P. FURBER.

“Resolved, That words are scarce able to convey the sense of sadness and sorrow that the melancholy news of his death brought to his old associates.

“Resolved, That in his loss we mourn a man of good natural talents and handsome acquirements, conciliating in his manners, generous and benevolent in his disposition, and amiable in the whole tenor of his conduct.

“Resolved, That in lamenting the death of a classmate possessing such qualities, not his numerous and ardent friends only, but we as a class must deeply deplore his loss.

“Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of our deceased classmate as an expression of our sincere sympathy in their great bereavement.”

Brook appointed to draft suitable resolutions on the death of Edward Fox Fessenden. They reported the following:

"We, the members of the senior class wish to express the deep regret which the sudden death of Edward Fox Fessenden has caused us. We know that in him we are deprived of one whom we had learned to admire and love, both for his intellectual attainments as well as for his cheerful companionship.

"With peculiar sorrow does his death come at such a time when we look back at the many happy hours we have spent together, as well as those dull ones which his presence has brightened and cheered. This sad loss, so near the end of our college course fills our hearts with a gloom of sadness which our coming festivities here will be powerless to dispel."

CLASS DINNERS.

Dec. 1, 1883. Complimentary to Yale, '87.

June 7, 1884. Complimentary to Yale, '87.

April 18, 1885, about 125 members of the class sat down to the sophomore dinner at the Quincy House. The president introduced the orator of the evening, Mr. W. B. Scofield, who delivered an oration on "Time" in his usual witty vein. In the enforced absence of the poet, Mr. Frank Dempster Sherman, Mr. Wetherbee kindly consented to write the poem at very short notice. The toast-master, Mr. J. L. Snelling, then took charge of the table and called upon the following gentlemen, who responded as follows: Class of '87, F. S. Coolidge; 'Varsity Crew, T. P. Burgess; 'Varsity Nine, F. B. Weistling; Class Crew, R. F. Fiske; Athletic Association, F. Remington; Mott Haven Team, H. L. Clark; Crimson, E. J. Rich; Advocate, W. Wetherbee; Lampoon, E. B. Stuart; "Sophomore Regions," W. Endicott; "Eighty-eight," J. S. Whistler.

The toasts were interspersed with numerous songs under the leadership of the chorister, Mr. W. E. Faulkner, and by solos from Messrs. Faulkner, Morrison and Carroll.

The committee of arrangements were Messrs Dexter, Herron, W. B. Scofield and Whistler.

May 21, 1886. Fifty-three members of the class met at the Parker House for the Junior dinner. The officers were:

President, F. S. Coolidge ; Orator, F. E. E. Hamilton ; Poet, W. Wetherbee ; Toast-master, J. L. Snelling ; Chorister, W. E. Faulkner ; Committee of Arrangements, F. S. Coolidge, T. C. Craig and S. W. White.

June 27, 1887. One hundred and sixty-four members of the class assembled at the Brunswick for the first triennial dinner. Mr. E. J. Rich presided as chairman of the class committee, and Mr. Francis Michael acted as toast-master, Mr. Shippen acting as chorister.

CLASS CRADLE.

All members of the Class who received degrees June 29, 1887, and marry after Commencement are eligible for this distinction. The Class Secretary and Class Committee will impartially consider all claims submitted to them, and will award the cradle to the child whom they shall deem fairly entitled to such good fortune.

CLASS LIVES.

It has been a custom, long established, for each member of the graduating class to leave with the Secretary a short sketch of his life, and these "lives" are bound together and preserved for the use of the class and of its biographer. It is to keep up this custom, and to provide a source of information for the class in after years, and even a means of identification of its members, that I have so persistently asked for your lives. Let me again urge upon you the importance of this duty. I assure you it is no whim of mine or no idle curiosity which prompts this demand. The "lives" serve a definite and useful purpose, though they may seem of little or no value now. Those who have already filled the blanks and those who have written lives, I thank most sincerely ; those who have not yet responded I must again entreat to send me either blanks or lives as soon as convenient.

The class is to be congratulated on having so large a fund already subscribed, but with the heavy expenses it has to bear in the first years, the amount is still too small. A number of gentlemen who doubtless intend to subscribe, have as yet neglected to send me their subscriptions. It is to be hoped that they will atone for this neglect by subscribing liberally and promptly.

I would also remind a number of subscribers that the first instalment of their subscriptions has not yet been paid, and beg that they will attend to the payment at once. All payments should be made to the Secretary, and will be promptly acknowledged.

The thanks of the class are due to our Class Day Committee for a contribution to the Class Fund larger than that of any previous committee, with the exception of that of 1886.

DECEASED.

RULUFF STERLING CHOATE.

Ruluff Sterling Choate, eldest son of Joseph H. Choate, was born in New York, Sept. 25, 1864. He fitted for college at the Berkeley School in New York, and passed his examinations with honors in the spring of 1882. He did not enter college immediately, but having passed a year abroad, entered in the fall of 1883 with the class of '87.

Mr. Choate was the second member of the class to be removed by death during the Freshman year. In him the class lost a man who promised to become one of its most prominent members. Though in college only six months he was already widely known to his classmates. His sociable disposition and marked individuality were as attractive to those who knew him intimately, as were his absolute independence and uniform cordiality of manner to casual acquaintances.

In his studies, he was undoubtedly one of the ablest men in the class. Though indifferent to rank for itself, he was eager in the pursuit of any branch of learning in which he felt an interest—and these were not few in number. He had thus acquired a fund of information remarkable in so young a man.

Many of those who had known him but the few months of the fall and winter terms, felt his loss as a personal one. Prominent among these was one, George C. Baker, who, strange to say, was himself destined not to live to the end of his college course.

Mr. Choate's death was very sudden. He went to his home in New York at the beginning of the Easter recess and died.

A meeting of the class was held after the recess, at which resolutions of grief at his loss, and sympathy with his family were passed.

EDWARD FOX FESSENDEN.

Edward Fox Fessenden was born in Portland, Maine, April 22, 1866. He lived in Portland until 1874, when he accompanied his parents on a nine months' trip to California, which was undertaken for his health, and returned much improved.

During his early school life he attended private schools in Portland, but only in the forenoon. This habit was continued until 1878, when he was sent for one year to the private school of the Rev. Mr. Knapp, at Plymouth, Mass. The next year he passed at home, attending a private school. In 1880 he entered Phillips Academy, Exeter, where he remained three years, when he was admitted as a freshman in Harvard University, at the age of seventeen.

His favorite studies were ancient and modern languages, his detestation, mathematics. In college he preferred political economy and history, studies which he pursued as soon as permitted to do so. His standing in his studies was respectable. He took much interest in athletics and twice received a prize for the half-mile run. During his junior year he was a member of the Crimson board as base ball editor. He was a member of the Art Club, Hasty Pudding Club, Institute, and B. O. II.

On the sixth of March at the beginning of the last term of his senior year, when at home, he became ill with a severe cold which developed into pneumonia, and died five days afterwards on the eleventh of March, 1887.

He had many strong friends among his classmates to whom his sterling qualities had bound him by the strongest ties.
